My dear Cousin Philip

I received in due time the cards and newspaper announcing the marriage of your aunt Florence, and afterwards your letter which gave me great pleasure. I am so glad you all think my photograph resembles my dear Mother, and that you also find points of similarity to members of your family. I think my photograph a very good likeness.

The description of cousin Florence wedding interested us very much. Will you convey to her our warmest congratulations?

We have made a gift to the British Museum of the letters of uncle John to our dear Mother. The letters were published some years ago in Keats's works edited by Mr

Buxton Forman. Probably
you may have seen in the English newspapers
the notice upon this subject. It has been very painful for me to part with those letters, that belonged to my dear Mother, and moreover were written by our uncle John, but what has influenced our decision is that after our death the letters might be lost or sold, and on the British Museum
they will at least be very much, but the Doctor says that the excess of mental work

is the principal cause of the bad state of his health. So we must have patience and wait till next year
when we hope he will finish his profession I have never finished the family
group which is a pity
after it was so much advanced and the likeness so striking. I hope when I write again to be able to send you some photographs
